INTRODUCTION

A whole generation of Americans can pinpoint details of their own lives on the day John F. Kennedy was assassinated, or when the Twin Towers fell. The snapshots and videos which emerge from eyewitnesses after such an event capture details in the moment, glimpses of ordinary people responding to the extraordinary as it unfolds before them. Mark’s gospel is flavored by that same immediacy and grittiness. With his very first line, Mark identifies “Jesus Christ, the Son of God.” Then scene upon scene come tumbling forth to validate his statement.

Most likely written around A.D.60, this account was probably intended for readers outside of the immediate area of Palestine. Very early tradition indicates that John Mark, the son of Mary of Jerusalem (Acts 12:12), and cousin of Barnabas (Col. 4:10), is indeed the writer of this gospel. Writing from the recollections of the Apostle Peter, who refers to him as “my son” (1 Peter 5:13), Mark often includes the names of people involved in specific events, or details of place and time omitted by the other gospel writers. While Mark himself probably did not personally witness most of the events he records, many scholars identify him with the young man following Jesus in garden of Gethsemane, who escaped naked in the confusion of the dark garden arrest (Mark 14:51). He set out with Paul and Barnabus on their first missionary journey, but turned back early on, which became a source of sharp disagreement between them regarding whether he should be allowed to accompany them on a later trip. (Acts 13:13; 15:37-40). The rift was eventually mended, and Paul mentions him as a “fellow-worker” and helpful companion in his later letters to Timothy and to Philemon. (2 Timothy 4:11, Philemon 24).

The story Mark tells is filled with action and emotion. This man, Jesus, heals with only a touch or a word; the demon-possessed are freed, the deaf hear, the blind see. He commands wind and sea, feeds crowds from mere crumbs, raises a dead girl to life. We are amazed right along with the crowds, astonished by what we witness.

But the man we encounter is not only a worker of miracles. He is a gentle story-teller who gathers children in his arms, then faces down religious and political authorities without a flinch. He speaks of a Kingdom where the first are last, the last are first, and where the King is servant of all. He chooses a flock of mismatched followers, and when He tells them that He will die, we feel their fear and bewilderment. We read of their failures, weakness and pettiness, and we are vaguely shocked by their unbelief.

As we study this gospel together, we will use the most basic of Bible study methods. For many of you, this will seem very simple—you’ve been doing this for years. But for others, it will open up a whole new understanding of how to read the Bible in a way that actually yields meaning. And we will walk with these very ordinary people who encountered the extraordinary Son of God, to find out how they ultimately answered the question, “Who is this man?”

What will your answer be?
Before we begin...

This study was prepared for use among women attending Bible studies at Main Street Church in Brigham City, Utah. There are many excellent study guides available, but not so many that teach the learner how to ask a good question, or how to begin exploring a passage on their own to understand what God may be saying to them. Anyone can follow a series of questions or borrow thoughts from a commentator, but learning to ask a good question, one that will lead in a fruitful direction, is another skill entirely. Among women in Utah there is a profound hunger to know the real Jesus Christ, but many are just beginning to emerge from Mormonism; because they have been taught that the Bible is untrustworthy, they have never been encouraged to seek Him out through its pages. This study is designed to help individuals to do precisely that. It was not my intention to create an exhaustive study of the gospel of Mark, but rather to use Mark’s account as the laboratory for practicing basic study skills in order to bring about a personal encounter with Jesus Christ, the Son of God through the living Word of God.

As a believer in Jesus Christ, I begin from this position:

1) The Bible is God’s Word to man, written by men who were inspired (‘God-breathed’) to place the words on the page. (2 Timothy 3:16,17)
2) These words have been transmitted accurately through the ages because God has protected their transmission. (1 Peter 1:23-25)
3) God wants me to understand His word. (1 John 5:20)
4) Through careful reading and study together with prayerful consideration, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit I can discover what God intends for me to understand. (John 16:13-15)

About the basic study methods employed in this guide...

There are many ways to approach Bible study, but in preparing this guide, I have utilized only the methods discussed below. This does not devalue nor preclude reference to scholarly research or commentaries, but as my purpose has been to teach basic Bible study methods, I have not consulted these in the preparation of this study guide. The only exception is in reference to information pertaining to the final verses of Mark’s Gospel.

How to read: Most of the time we read too fast. No matter what we are reading, from newspapers to novels to legal documents, we are impatient to get to the “bottom line,” so we dash through the words, grasping at whatever is within easy reach. In our hurry we rarely pause long enough to consider the details or subtle connections that yield a deeper understanding. When we read God’s Word we must read slowly. We must read repeatedly. We must read observantly. These are the very words of God, so we must handle them carefully. (2 Timothy 2:15)

Learning to Observe: We must learn to look carefully at what the text actually says, and what it does not say. Repeated words and phrases indicate important information. Details of location, time of day, and audience are included for a reason; we seek to understand the author’s intent in including them.
Understanding Context: A few years ago we went on a study-trip to Israel. At every stop as we traveled the country, our teacher would ask us to make a “skyline check,” taking a careful look at the horizon in every direction in order to understand not only where we were, but how we got there, and how it related to the surrounding area. She continually asked us “What can you see from here that you recognize?” This is exactly what we do when we observe context. We make careful observation of not just the preceding and following sentences, but also the sequence of events surrounding the passage we are studying. We ask “How did we get here from there?”

Cross References are Bible passages using the same words or phrases, or which speak of the same topic. Most modern Bible translations have these noted in the side columns or as footnotes. The New Testament contains many quotations from the Old Testament, and each will give insight into the other. Cross referencing is essential to understanding how an idea is presented throughout the whole of scripture, helping to guard against misinterpretation. A concordance lists all of the words that occur in a particular translation, and the verses in which they appear. Learning to use a concordance is a basic skill for thorough Bible study.

Defining terms: It is often helpful to consult a standard English dictionary. A Bible dictionary is even better; it defines terms from a spiritual perspective, and contains factual background information about people, places, customs, geography, and important words or doctrines found in the Bible.

Mapping allows us to place events in a real context; we can observe distances, political boundaries and geographical relationships, all of which help to anchor the account in a factual location. Locating events on a map often yields insight into why the writer includes certain seemingly minor details.

Charting is one way of organizing information to gain a clearer view of what is being said. It allows us to gather all of the various bits into one place to see how they relate to one another, or to highlight similarities and contrasts.

If these lessons leave you wanting more, if they raise as many questions as they answer, I hope you will pursue your study of the scriptures using the skills you’ve begun to practice. At the end of this study guide there is a page entitled “Basic Inductive Bible Study.” This is the way I study. But all study of the Bible is pointless unless it leads us to encounter the One who is Himself the Living Word of God. I pray that your understanding will be deepened by this exploration of Mark’s gospel, and that you will grow in your devotion to Jesus Christ.

The word ‘parable’ is from the Greek parabole which means “to place beside, to cast alongside.” In its simplest definition, a parable is a story that places one thing beside another for the purpose of teaching. Parables are puzzling by design, but the images stick in the mind; they both reveal and conceal, awakening an appetite for spiritual truth in those with ‘ears to hear’.

   Why does his reference to the ‘Son of Man’ so enrage the religious leaders?
   a) What irony do you see in their charge of blasphemy?
   b) How do they express their contempt?

Mark 14:66-72 In the courtyard

5. What is the difference between Peter’s denial and Judas’ betrayal of Jesus?

Can you think of a time when you have acted in a similar way? Why did you do this?

Mark 15:1-21 The Civil Trial

In your view, is He simply ‘the man from Nazareth who died’, or the Son of God?

What difference does this make in your understanding of the empty tomb?

Mark 16:9-14  Disbelief Among the disciples
Note: The earliest texts of Mark’s gospel end at 16:8, but the majority of existing texts include verses 9-20. A number of texts include a shorter ending after verse 8. The authorship of these verses is strongly debated among scholars, but it seems clear from both internal and external evidence that Mark did not himself write them. Most modern English translations note these textual variations with asterisks or column notes. We can only speculate as to why the earliest copies of Mark’s gospel end at verse 8, but material included from verses 9-20 is consistent with the other gospels and the book of Acts; it is considered to be historically authentic, and a part of the New Testament canon.

3. Mark’s theme of belief and unbelief is continued in this section, even if he did not personally pen these words.

a) How many times had Jesus told His disciples that He would suffer, die, and rise again? Look back over your notes to find them all. Why do you think they didn’t believe it?

b) Given all that they had seen and experienced with Him, why do you think they would ‘refuse to believe’ when the women brought them the news?

How would you have responded?
4. Do you see a difference between unbelief and disbelief? If so, support your answer from what you have studied.

Mark 16:15-20  The end of unbelief

6. What does Jesus command His followers to do, now that they know He is alive? Write a summary statement using your own words.

_Do you think these words of Jesus apply to us today? In what ways? How will you obey?_

Who Is This Man?

What have you learned about Jesus Christ, the Son of God? (Mark 1:1)

_How do you now respond to his question, ‘Who do you say I am?’_

Based on what you have learned from this study, how will you follow Him?

How will this understanding affect your response to Jesus?
BASIC INDUCTIVE BIBLE STUDY

Inductive: Persuasive; inducing; using or produced by logical induction.

Induction: the act or process of arriving at a general conclusion from observation of particular facts. (Webster’s Collegiate Dictionary)

In Inductive Bible Study we carefully observe the text, consider the facts of the text, investigate the meaning of the text, examine the context, compare other scripture to help interpret the text, then we apply the text. We interact with God’s Word personally, discovering truth for ourselves. Our goal is to know God, allowing Him to transform us through applying His truth to our lives.

THREE ASPECTS TO THE PROCESS

WHAT DOES IT SAY? Observation

WHAT DOES THE TEXT ACTUALLY SAY?
- What are the facts? The main idea? The people, places, events?
- Who wrote it? To whom? Under what circumstances?
- Does the author use contrasts, comparisons, illustrations, or questions?

NOTICE repeated words, phrases or ideas. How do they relate to the whole section?

CONSIDER LITERARY FORM: narrative, letter, poetry, parable, etc.

WHAT IS THE CONTEXT? What comes before & after?
- Consider how this section fits into the larger picture.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN? Interpretation

DEFINE KEY WORDS: consult a regular dictionary, and a Bible dictionary.
- ‘Key words’ are words which are central to the meaning of the text.

CONSULT maps or encyclopedias for geographic & cultural understanding.

LET SCRIPTURE INTERPRET SCRIPTURE:
- Avoid commentaries until you have completed your own study of the text.
- Compare cross-references: other passages which deal with the same topic, or use the same words or phrases.
- Compare other versions, including both translations and paraphrases.
- What did the author intend to communicate?

WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO ME? Application

PRAYER IS ESSENTIAL TO APPLYING THE SCRIPTURES TO LIFE.
- ASK the Lord: How does this truth apply to me? How might it work out in my life?
- ALLOW God to direct your attention to specifics.
- ASK Him to empower you to live according to what He has revealed to you.
- WATCH for opportunities to act on what you’ve discovered.
